What is RGM Connect?

Using the Ronnie Gardiner Method® (RGM), participants engage in music, rhythm, and movement activities designed to strengthen spontaneous communication, social connection and reciprocity, executive functioning, and coordination.

This specialized cognitive and movement-based training takes place in a supportive small-group setting, with limited enrollment so our Certified RGM Trainers can tailor activities to participants' needs and abilities.

Who Is RGM Connect For?

Young adults on the autism spectrum who want to strengthen communication, social connection, and executive functioning skills. Participants should be able to follow instructions, manage their verbal and physical responses, and participate in group activities without ongoing individual support.
